Ketch
Sales Hiring Team

Dear Hiring Team,

What caught my attention about Ketch is the problem you are solving. I am already in those conversations today at Analyst1. Customers want to know what an AI platform can access, how that access is controlled and whether they can prove later what the system actually touched. If those questions cannot be answered, the technology usually does not get deployed.

My background also fits both sides of the Ketch sale. At Couchbase, I sold to data leaders, engineering managers and architects dealing with governance, permissions and distributed data. At Adobe, I sold Experience Manager and Analytics to marketing teams focused on content, traffic and customer data. I understand the tension between making data useful and making sure it is governed correctly.

I run MEDDPICC and keep my deals grounded in the business case. At Red Hat, that helped me close a $5M annual agreement with Centene that included professional services and went through finance, sourcing and legal. At Gigamon, I managed more than $5M in qualified pipeline against a $750K number and reviewed the forecast every week.

Building pipeline has also been a big part of my career. Most of the territories I have taken over started with very little. At Cloudflare, I built roughly $4M in pipeline across 35 accounts and finished at 115% of a $1M quota.

I have spent 16 years selling enterprise technology, finished between 115% and 160% of quota and earned President's Club at three companies. I also have an MBA from the Walton College of Business.

I would welcome the chance to talk about the territory, the accounts you want opened and what a strong first year looks like.

Sincerely,
Ken Clemons
