

Dear Hiring Team,

Financial services has been part of my territory for most of my career. I have sold into Edward Jones and Mastercard at multiple companies, and those relationships carried over because of how I handled the first engagement. This year I closed Arvest Bank and Alliant Credit Union. The Alliant deal went through security, technology, finance and a full third-party risk review before it was approved. I also closed Paycom while at Couchbase.

I understand how financial institutions buy. The cycles are usually longer, the risk reviews matter and there are no shortcuts around security, compliance or procurement.

I also have a strong background in compliance and security. At Alfresco, I sold enterprise content and records management around retention, audit trails and governance. Since 2022, I have worked in cybersecurity at Cloudflare, Gigamon and Analyst1, selling into security, infrastructure and risk teams.

I run enterprise deals from beginning to end: discovery, executive presentations, business case, procurement, legal and close. At Red Hat, that included a $5M annual agreement with Centene that displaced an incumbent and went through the CFO organization, sourcing and legal. I use MEDDPICC to keep qualification and forecasting honest.

I have spent 16 years in enterprise technology sales, finished between 115% and 160% of quota and earned President's Club at three companies. I also have an MBA from the Walton College of Business.

I would welcome the chance to talk about the territory and the accounts you want opened first.

Sincerely,

Ken Clemons
